DUKE UNIVERSITY'S FUQUA SCHOOL OF BUSINESS

Master of Management Studies: Foundations of Business

Program Description

The new Master of Management Studies (MMS): Foundations of Business is a pre-experience master's degree providing fundamental entry-level business skills and subject matter knowledge. The program focuses on building the technical skills and capabilities needed to obtain, and succeed in, entry-level analyst positions in finance, marketing, consulting, and general management.

In less than a year, you will learn the fundamentals of finance, accounting, marketing, strategy, operations, decision analysis, and management. You will expand your career options and graduate with a broad and relevant skill set needed to successfully start your career.

Who Should Attend

MMS: Foundations of Business is for individuals without previous business training and experience who may have recently earned an undergraduate or graduate degree (even those in the process of obtaining a PhD) in areas including liberal arts, science, or engineering. The MMS program combines the depth, breadth, and critical thinking skills from the liberal arts and sciences with fundamental business skills to position you to take on a variety of roles in your professional life. The Foundations of Business program provides the necessary know-how to leverage your existing capabilities, and will help you jump start a career in business.
