STATEMENT OF NEED

The treatment of major depression has advanced with the availability of many pharmacotherapeutic options. Achieving remission often means the use of rational polypharmacy. This series will explore the evidence for augmentation therapies in major depression and the treatment of depression in the medically ill. The role of side effects in making rational treatment choices will also be addressed. Our faculty is renowned for translating complex data into simple, clinically relevant, take-home messages that are useful to every practicing clinician.

TARGET AUDIENCE

The target audience will be psychiatrists, psychologists, primary care physicians, internists, OB/GYNs, nurse practitioners, physician assistants, pharmacists, nurses, social workers, certified case managers, and other mental health care providers.

ACTIVITY GOAL

To help clinicians recognize residual symptoms in major depression and use evidence-based psychiatry to manage these symptoms. The series will also address the tolerability and safety profiles of different pharmacotherapeutic options.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

After completing this continuing education activity, participants should be able to:

1. Evaluate the treatment of residual symptoms in patients with major depression using evidence based pharmacotherapy
2. Analyze the complexities in treating depression in the medically ill patient
3. Summarize the role of side effects in determining optimal pharmacotherapy in treating the depressed patient
